

Why Parents Need a "Window" to Protect their Kids from Sex Abuse

Parents are being kept in the dark about child sex predators in schools, sports, camps, and churches, because victims are not being allowed to go to court. It's time to open "windows" for the victims in every state so parents can protect their kids.

PURPOSE OF A WINDOW

Identifies hidden child predators and the institutions that endanger children

Shifts the cost of abuse from the victims and taxpayers to those who caused it

Educates the public about how pervasive this risk is to kids

CHILD SEX ABUSE VICTIMS ON AVERAGE, COME FORWARD AT AGE 52

That means your child is being educated, coached, and mentored by people who were abusing kids up to 40 years ago and no one knows.

Perpetrators were shielded from criminal prosecution and survivors were barred from filing civil claims long before they were able to disclose their abuse because of historically short statutes of limitations across the U.S.
