I. INTRODUCTION: AN OVERVIEW OF CHILD MARRIAGE

A. THE GLOBAL PREVALENCE OF CHILD MARRIAGE

The global rates of child marriage are high. While victims are predominantly female, a significant number are male. According to UNICEF, twelve million girls are married before their eighteenth birthday every year. 2 Around the world, approximately 650 million women and girls alive today were married before they turned eighteen. 3 For males, a study analyzing data from eighty-two countries found that about one in thirty boys is married as a child. 4 UNICEF estimates that 115 million boys and men alive today were married before they turned eighteen. 5 This brings the present-day, worldwide total number of child brides and grooms to about 765 million, 85% of whom are girls and 15% of whom are boys.

1 CHILD USA considers “child marriage” to be a form of “forced marriage,” as minors are legally incapable of providing consent. CHILD USA defines “child marriage” as a formal marriage or informal union where one or both parties is under the age of eighteen. This definition is in keeping with both United States and international law. See U.S. DEP’T OF STATE ET AL., UNITED STATES GLOBAL STRATEGY TO EMPOWER ADOLESCENT GIRLS 5 (2016) (defining “child, early and forced marriage (CEFM)” as “a formal marriage or informal union where one or both parties is under the age of 18”); Child and forced marriage, including in humanitarian settings, UNITED NATIONS OFF. OF THE HIGH COM’R FOR HUMAN RIGHTS, https://www.ohchr.org/en/issues/women/wrgs/pages/childmarriage.aspx (last visited Nov. 30, 2021) (defining “child marriage” as “any marriage where at least one of the parties is under 18 years of age” and “forced marriage” as “a marriage in which one and/or both parties have not personally expressed their full and free consent to the union”).

Various factors contribute to the high prevalence of child marriage across the globe. The most persistent drivers include gender inequality, poverty, social norms and religious traditions, and national insecurity. More recently, the COVID-19 pandemic significantly affected occurrences

6 Many cultures operating within patriarchal systems place a large emphasis on controlling female sexuality and virginity. Why it happens, GIRLS NOT BRIDES, https://www.girlsnotbrides.org/why-does-it-happen/ (last visited Sept. 29, 2022). Often, this is because some societies value girls who are virgins more highly than those who are not. Id. As a result, girls may be denied access to sexual health care and information, and in some cases, may even be criminally prosecuted for engaging in sex outside of marriage. Id. Additionally, “in many places, girls who have relationships or become pregnant outside of marriage are shamed for bringing dishonor on their family, or even stopped from going to school.” Id. Many parents and families believe early marriage is an avenue to avoid such consequences. Id. Sadly, some girls are even forced to marry their rapists “to spare their families the stigma associated with unmarried pregnancy.” Child marriage – Frequently Asked Questions, UNITED NATIONS POPULATION FUND (Feb. 2022), https://www.unfpa.org/child-marriage-frequently-asked-questions#why%20does%20child%20marriage%20happen.

7 In several parts of the world, marriage is an economic transaction that can improve a destitute family’s situation. In fact, “nearly 40% of girls in the world’s poorest countries are married as children, twice the global average.” Why it happens, supra note 6. In many impoverished countries, marrying girls off is seen as a financial solution to secure the future of both the family and the girls themselves. Child marriage – Frequently Asked Questions, supra note 6. This is due, in part, to the gender inequality discussed in note 6; families view an investment in their son’s education as more valuable than an investment in their daughter’s education. As a result, families struggling economically may marry off a young daughter to avoid the cost of her education or simply to “ease the financial load of caring for a child.” Child Marriage, COUNCIL ON FOREIGN RELATIONS, https://www.cfr.org/child-marriage/#/1/ (last visited Sept. 29, 2022) [hereinafter CFR Report]. Many times, families who cannot afford to properly care for their daughters see marriage as a way to provide for their daughter’s future by entrusting the husband or husband’s family with her care. Child marriage – Frequently Asked Questions, supra note 6. Marriage is also used as a means to repay debts, manage disputes, and form social, political, and economic alliances. Why it happens, supra note 6. In some communities, dowries or bride prices also play a role. Because a younger bride is often viewed as more valuable, the dowry for a younger girl is typically smaller. In cases where the bride’s family pays the dowry, this creates an incentive for the parents to enter their daughter into marriage at a younger age. CFR Report, supra note 7. In countries where the groom’s family pays the dowry, a girl’s parents may marry her off to secure an additional source of income. Child marriage – Frequently Asked Questions, supra note 6.

8 In many communities, child marriage is viewed as widely accepted or even normal because it is a custom that has been practiced for many generations or is embedded within their religious beliefs. CFR Report, supra note 7; Why it happens, supra note 6. Often, these traditions entail parents and elders selecting spouses for the community’s girls at the age of their menstruation. CFR Report, supra note 7; Why it happens, supra note 6. For many cultures, this is a way to keep the girls within the community as free domestic help. CFR Report, supra note 7.

9 National insecurity is synonymous with “state fragility” and may include a state’s “loss of physical control of its territory or a monopoly on the legitimate use of force; the erosion of legitimate authority to make collective decisions; an inability to provide reasonable public services;” and/or the “inability to interact with states as a full member of the international community.” THE FUND FOR PEACE, What Does State Fragility Mean?, FRAGILE STATES INDEX, https://fragilestatesindex.org/asked-questions/what-does-state-fragility-mean/ (last visited Sept. 29, 2022). Child marriage rates typically increase in countries afflicted by humanitarian crises such as war, generalized violence, or natural disasters. CFR Report, supra note 7; Why it happens, supra note 6. Such instability can greatly affect the availability of critical resources like food, which leads many families to marry off their daughters for the financial reasons discussed in note 7. Conflict and unrest may also result in a community’s displacement, which can cause the breakdown of “social networks and protection systems, making girls more vulnerable to child marriage.” Id. Displacement can also persuade girls to marry “men who promise to reunite them with family members who have already migrated or been displaced.” Id. In areas experiencing extreme violence, parents may also “view marriage as of child marriage worldwide.\textsuperscript{10}

\textbf{B. \textsc{The Prevalence of Child Marriage in the United States}}

Child marriage is more of a problem in the United States than most Americans know. It is a pervasive issue with devastating domestic consequences. Between 2000 and 2018, almost 300,000 children were married in the United States alone.\textsuperscript{11} Of those marriages, an estimated 30,000–60,000, or 10–20%, occurred “at an age or spousal age difference that should have been considered a sex crime.”\textsuperscript{12} A 2021 study analyzing marriage certificate data from all fifty states found that approximately 86% of these underage marriages involved girls and 14% involved boys.\textsuperscript{13} While the general public often assumes that child marriage is an issue that is limited to third-world countries, the practice is widespread across the United States today.

\textsuperscript{10} The COVID-19 pandemic has significantly affected the lives of young girls across the globe. The virus required school closings and travel restrictions in many countries, exacerbating the difficulties many girls already face in accessing “health care, social services and community support that protect them from child marriage.” UNICEF Press Release, supra note 2; see also Child marriage has more than doubled during the COVID-19 pandemic with numbers set to increase, World Vision warns, WORLD VISION (May 20, 2021), \url{https://www.wvi.org/newsroom/it-takes-world/child-marriage-has-more-doubled-during-covid-19-pandemic-numbers-set} [hereinafter World Vision COVID-19 Press Release]; Nelsy Affoum & Isabel Santagostina Recavaran, Child marriage: the unspoken consequences of COVID-19, WORLD BANK (Oct. 9, 2020), \url{https://blogs.worldbank.org/developmenttalk/child-marriage-unspoken-consequence-covid-19}.

\textsuperscript{11} Indeed, school closings may result in some girls never returning to the classroom, as they were pushed towards marriage because school was no longer an available alternative. Claudia Cappa et al., COVID-19: A threat to progress against child marriage, UNICEF 1, 6 (Mar. 2021), \url{https://data.unicef.org/wp-content/uploads/2021/03/UNICEF-report---COVID-19---A-threat-to-progress-against-child-marriage-1.pdf}. This in turn promotes the gender inequality that bolsters child marriage. UNICEF Press Release, supra note 2. These pandemic-created conditions “generated the largest increase in child marriages in 25 years,” and as a result, UNICEF projects that “over the next decade, up to 10 million more girls will be at risk of becoming child brides by 2030.” World Vision COVID-19 Press Release; Cappa et al., at 16.

C. Negative Consequences of Child Marriage

Child marriage triggers severe adverse effects for its victims, their offspring, and society as a whole. The consequences of child marriage include slower economic and social development, increased risk of violence, serious health issues, and even death. Society bears the economic burden of these devastating outcomes.

1. Debilitating Illness and Death

The risk of death spikes for victims of child marriage because, in many areas that practice child marriage, there is an expectation that the child bride will quickly produce offspring. In fact, the worldwide leading causes of death for girls between the ages of fifteen and nineteen are complications from pregnancy and childbirth. Tragically, girls aged fifteen to nineteen are “twice as likely to die in childbirth as mothers aged twenty and older.”

Child mothers also face heightened risks of suffering serious health conditions such as obstetric fistula, a debilitating condition that can cause incontinence in the mother and the death of the baby within the first week of its life. Adolescent mothers are also more susceptible to “eclampsia, puerperal endometritis, and systemic infections.” Mothers with eclampsia experience seizures or coma. If untreated, endometritis has a fatality rate of 17% for mothers, and, in a small number of cases, can cause complications such as sepsis or necrotizing fasciitis.\textsuperscript{19} Systemic infection is one of the top five causes of maternal deaths worldwide. Systemic infection after delivery also poses an increased risk of postpartum depression and can negatively impact breastfeeding and the development of a bond between the mother and baby.\textsuperscript{20}

Moreover, sexually transmitted infections and diseases pose a significant threat to child brides.\textsuperscript{21} Many of the risk factors for contracting HIV occur at higher rates in child marriages than in adult marriages, such as “early sexual onset, unsafe sex, age-disparate relationships, low educational attainment, limited access to information and services, social isolation, and experience of intimate partner violence.”\textsuperscript{22} In fact, child brides who are married under the age of fifteen are \textbf{“almost 50\% more likely to have experienced either physical or sexual intimate partner violence”} than girls who are married after they reach eighteen.\textsuperscript{23} Studies in the United States show that American victims of child marriage are acutely vulnerable to higher rates of psychiatric disorders\textsuperscript{24} as well as physical, emotional, or verbal abuse.\textsuperscript{25}

\textsuperscript{25} United States’ Child Marriage Problem, supra note 12.
2. Health Effects on the Offspring of Child Brides

Life-threatening health effects also plague infants and children born out of child marriages. Stillbirths and newborn deaths are higher among offspring of child mothers than among offspring of mothers between the ages of twenty and twenty-nine.\(^{26}\) Additionally, teenage mothers have a higher risk of giving birth prematurely or to babies with a low birth weight.\(^{27}\)

Premature birth often means the baby’s organs have not yet fully developed, which may result in an array of health complications such as breathing problems, cerebral palsy, vision and hearing problems, and developmental delays.\(^{28}\) Babies born with a low birth weight have an increased risk for negative health effects both in the short and long-term.\(^{29}\) Immediate health problems may include infections, hypoglycemia, and jaundice.\(^{30}\) In the long-term, low birth weight babies may experience delayed motor and social development, learning disabilities, heart disease, high blood pressure, and diabetes.\(^{31}\)

3. Social and Economic Costs

Child marriage also results in developmental consequences that bear social and economic costs. For instance, victims of child marriage face increased educational obstacles that impact the rest of their lives. In some nations, “there is evidence of almost a binary option of either going to school or getting married early.” Girls in the United States who marry before the age of nineteen are 50% more likely to drop out of high school and four times less likely to graduate from college. As a result, girls who enter marriage at a young age are significantly less likely to receive education and the countless, life-changing benefits that follow, including fewer childbirths, increased lifetime earnings, improved household income, reduced likelihood of experiencing intimate partner violence, and increased decision-making ability, making it nearly impossible to achieve their full potential or to make their greatest contributions to the larger public good. Considering “education is one of the most powerful drivers of gender equality,” this diminished educational attainment for girls further entrenches discriminatory gender norms.

\(^{30}\) Id.

\(^{31}\) Id.

There is also a significant economic impact: reduced female earnings combined with the increased fertility and population growth resulting from child marriage has a ripple effect that 37 Wodon et al., supra note 33, at 3. “[O]n average across 15 countries, a girl marrying at 13 will have 26 percent more children over her lifetime than if she had married at 18 or later. If a girl marries at 17, she would still have on average 17 percent more children versus marrying at 18 or later.” Id.

impacts the global economy and the “intergenerational transmission of poverty.”

Research shows that “if child marriage had ended in 2015, the global economy could have saved $566 billion by 2030.” In the United States, between 70% and 80% of marriages involving a child end in divorce, and child marriage followed by divorce can double the likelihood that child mothers will descend into poverty. Consequently, in addition to being a dire social issue, child marriage is a profoundly economic issue, carrying “tremendous intergenerational and societal costs.”

38 Wodon & Petroni, supra note 35.

D. A BRIEF SUMMARY OF INTERNATIONAL CHILD MARRIAGE LAW

The international community has condemned child marriage, with the United Nations (“UN”) actively trying to limit its occurrence worldwide. In 1979 and 1989, the UN passed two international treaties that were foundational in establishing child marriage as a violation of human rights: The Convention on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (“CEDAW”) and the Convention on the Rights of the Child (“CRC”), respectively. The CRC—considered one of the most universally endorsed and ratified treaties in history—defined all humans under the age of eighteen as children. Together, these conventions internationally denounce the practice of child marriage and identify a child’s right not to be married before age 18.

In 2015, the UN Sustainable Development Goals (“SDGs”)—a set of goals considered to be “the crowning achievement of the development agenda”—went further and highlighted child marriage as a threat to global development. The SDGs incorporated the primary aims of the CRC and the CEDAW, and called for eliminating “all harmful practices, such as child, early and forced marriage and female genital mutilations.” This call to action is ongoing; in 2014, 2016,

2018, and 2020, the UN General Assembly passed four separate resolutions calling for UN Member States to strengthen and accelerate action to address child, early, and forced marriage.\textsuperscript{48} Despite international efforts to end child marriage, cultural and religious exemptions to child marriage laws facilitate its continuation. Many countries and U.S. states allow exceptions to minimum marital ages when there is parental consent, court authorization, or customary or religious laws that take precedence over national law.\textsuperscript{49}

Religion is often raised as a reason to allow child marriages, even though the UN Population Fund asserts that “there are no major religious traditions that require child marriage,” and it “does not warrant protection as a cultural or religious practice.”\textsuperscript{50} Nevertheless, in some countries, religious affiliation acts as an exception to the national age requirements for marriage. For example, in the Philippines, the national minimum age to marry is twenty-one, but exceptions exist for Muslim boys, who can marry at fifteen, and Muslim girls, who can marry at puberty.\textsuperscript{51} Religious and cultural exemptions to marital age of consent laws like this are common across the globe.\textsuperscript{52} In the United States, the First Amendment recognizes an absolute right to religious belief that need not be tied to a major organized religious denomination.\textsuperscript{53} Therefore, religious exemptions for child marriage can be applicable across many sects. The Pew Research Center

\textsuperscript{50} Child marriage – Frequently Asked Questions, supra note 6.
\textsuperscript{52} Arthur et al., supra note 32, at 52.
identified at least 117 nations that allow children to marry through these and other kinds of non-religious legal loopholes.\textsuperscript{54}

\end{center}

\textbf{E. CHILD MARRIAGE LAW IN THE UNITED STATES}

Marriage law belongs to the States first and foremost, though it is subject to constitutional restrictions. For example, the right to same-sex marriage under \textit{Obergefell v. Hodges}\textsuperscript{55} and the right to interracial marriage under \textit{Loving v. Virginia}\textsuperscript{56} Despite the persistent occurrence of child marriage in the United States, the American government consistently fails to take federal action to confront the problem. On the international level, the United States Congress declined to ratify the

\begin{itemize}
\item \textsuperscript{54} Sandstrom & Theodorou, supra note 51.
\item \textsuperscript{55} 576 U.S. 644 (2105).
\item \textsuperscript{56} 388 U.S. 1 (1967).
\end{itemize}
two UN conventions that form the bedrock of the international community’s progress in eradicating child marriage. While the United States signed the CRC, it is the only country that has yet to ratify it, preserving its status as a “Signatory” instead of a “State Party” to the Convention.\(^57\) The United States also stands alone as the only country in the Western hemisphere, and the only industrialized democracy, that has not ratified the CEDAW.\(^58\) By refusing to ratify, the United States withholds its consent to be bound by these conventions, and thus avoids being held accountable to the international community for any violations. On the national level, there is no federal law banning child marriage; as a result, marriage is governed by the States under the federalist legal structure.

State autonomy over the issue of child marriage means that the United States lacks national consensus regarding proper and effective child marriage laws. This decentralized system creates a legal framework in which certain states strongly protect against child marriage while others maintain lax laws that facilitate the practice. For instance, state laws vary widely on the legal minimum age for marriage. Delaware, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, and Rhode Island have banned child marriage by establishing a minimum marriage age of eighteen,\(^59\) while states with more lenient laws—such as California, Mississippi, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Washington, West Virginia, and Wyoming—have no legally enforced minimum age for marriage.\textsuperscript{60} This disparity produces “destination” states for child marriage.\textsuperscript{61} Missouri has historically been one such destination, with evidence of individuals crossing state lines to marry fifteen-year-old brides; some have traveled to Missouri from as far away as Oregon, Idaho, Utah, and Florida.\textsuperscript{62}

In the absence of a federal prohibition against child marriage, most state laws still offer avenues through which child marriage persists. Indeed, state child marriage laws are fraught with legal loopholes; while many states set the age floor for marriage at eighteen, there are many exceptions to this rule that “can in effect drop the true minimum marriage age much lower.”\textsuperscript{63} Common loopholes include parental consent, judicial approval, and lack of official proof of age and residency requirements.\textsuperscript{64}

1. \textit{Parental Consent and Judicial Approval}

Two of the most pervasive exceptions to the marriage age floor are parental consent and judicial approval. The majority of states facilitate marriages for children aged sixteen to eighteen “based on parental consent alone.”\textsuperscript{65} Parental consent exceptions “pose one of the greatest concerns with respect to forced marriages, since parental consent can so easily equal parental

\begin{flushleft}
\textsuperscript{60} \textit{Id.}
\textsuperscript{65} State Statute Compilation, \textit{supra} note 63, at 1.
\end{flushleft}
coercion.” Yet, consent by at least one parent is often enough to acquire a marriage license for a child.

Even when parental consent alone is not enough to authorize a child marriage, it often drives the outcome in judicial approval processes instead of the minor’s own wishes. Assigning judges the responsibility for approving adolescent marriages can indeed be problematic. In many states, judicial approval is required only in cases involving minors younger than sixteen years old. While the judicial approval process in these cases may be quite rigorous, the “fact that a judge is only involved for certain younger children weakens the state’s minimum marriage age laws as a whole.” For instance, if a state’s age floor is codified at eighteen, but judicial scrutiny is only triggered for marriages involving fifteen-year-olds, then most marriages for sixteen and seventeen-year-olds will be approved quite easily. Thus, the only age floor that is actually enforced is set at fifteen.

Further, some states assign minor marriage petitions to judges in generalist courts who “cannot be expected to be attuned to coercive control or other dynamics of family and intimate partner violence.” This is because generalist judges often lack the experience, training, and resources needed to conduct sufficiently diligent inquiries that are necessary to properly evaluate child marriage cases or detect forced marriage.\textsuperscript{73} Sometimes, judges even treat pregnancy as proof that marriage would be in the child’s best interests.\textsuperscript{74} Unfortunately, pregnancy in these cases often indicates that the child was abused by the intended spouse or is being forced into the marriage by their parents.\textsuperscript{75}

Due to inattentiveness, inexperience, or being motivated by factors other than the child's well-being, parental and judicial consent to child marriage can place children in grave danger.

2. \textit{Proof of Age and Residency Requirements}

Age floors can also be easily circumvented in states that lack proof of age requirements for marriage. Marriage license data shows that impermissibly young children have been married in states where they were not required to prove their age with official documents.\textsuperscript{76} In fact, only \textbf{twenty states strictly require official proof of age for all marriage applicants}.\textsuperscript{77} Additionally, state laws that lack residency requirements allow individuals to sidestep their own state’s strong age protections simply by crossing into a state with lax ones.

In the absence of a national minimum marriage age, which could be constitutionally challenging, many states can issue a child of \textit{any age} a marriage license as long as its own state law exceptions are met.\textsuperscript{78} As a result, state laws that (1) set marriage age floors at eighteen-years-

These unofficial marriages take several forms, including conjugal cohabitation, marriage by adoption, and marriage by contract. Conjugal cohabitation occurs when the marital parties reside together but never obtain a marriage license through the state, much like a common law marriage. Marriage by adoption occurs when an elder spouse adopts the younger in order to gain legal rights and protections and still avoid laws prohibiting child marriage. Finally, marriage by contract occurs when a parent contracts on behalf of their underage child and} old with no exceptions; and (2) require all marriage license applicants to provide official proof of their age, regardless of how old they appear, would most effectively prevent child marriage in the United States. CHILD USA also hopes to remove judicial discretion entirely from marriage laws, so no child under age 18 is accidentally married in the United States. However, in those states where judicial discretion still exists for marriage approval, trauma-informed judicial training is a necessary step to better educate judges about the negative and life-long consequences of child marriage.

promises that the child will wed the other party once they reach the “age of majority.” Some of these unofficial marriages are never registered, and others are registered once a child reaches the legal age. Still, even when the union exists outside the legal bounds of marriage, children endure the harms inflicted by the practice.
As discussed further below, the laws regulating child marriage in the United States vary widely from state to state. Some are very restrictive regarding underage marriage, while others are regrettably lax. Above, the States, Washington, D.C., and United States territories are grouped based on the most important characteristics in the creation of strong marriage laws—a strict minimum marriage age of eighteen, enforced by a requirement that all applicants—regardless of age—provide official proof of their age\(^9\) before they can receive a marriage license. The groupings are given a ranking between one and five—one representing the states and territories with the least effective laws for preventing child marriage, and five representing the states and territories with the strongest laws for preventing child marriage.

\(^9\) This Report and its rankings do not consider Social Security Numbers to be official proof of age, as they are not on their face indicative of age.
territories with the most effective laws for preventing child marriage.\(^80\) Importantly, these rankings do not reflect the rate of child marriage in each state, but rather the strength of the law in each state or territory to deter child marriage.\(^81\)

\(^80\) Due to the intricacies of each state’s laws, the states in the same grouping may not all have equally effective laws in prohibiting/limiting child marriage. This ranking is simply a tool to provide a general picture of how the states’ marriage laws compare to one another.

\(^81\) For example, Florida and Delaware are both ranked as a 3 on this graph despite having vastly different rates of child marriage in their states (between 2000 and 2018, Florida reached 17,274 child marriages, while Delaware only realized 219). United States’ Child Marriage Problem, supra note 12. Nevertheless, the strength of their laws preventing child marriage are substantially similar; while they both impose relatively strict marriage age floors—Florida at seventeen-years-old with parental consent and Delaware at eighteen-years-old—neither state requires its marriage applicants to provide official proof of age prior to obtaining a marriage license.
B. HISTORICAL OVERVIEW OF STATE LAWS

Alabama

Since 2000, Alabama has had the ninth-highest number of total child marriages in the nation and the eighth-highest number of child marriages per capita.\(^{82}\) Between 2000 and 2018, Alabama sanctioned approximately 9,166 child marriages, including the marriage of a fourteen-year-old girl to a seventy-four-year-old man.\(^{83}\) Of those 9,166 child marriages, approximately 7% met the definition of sex crimes under existing law.\(^{84}\) While Alabama raised the minimum marriage age from fourteen to sixteen in 2003, child marriages still account for almost 5% of all marriages in the state.\(^{85}\) In Alabama, a child under sixteen cannot enter into a marriage under any circumstances since 2003.\(^{86}\) Sixteen and seventeen-year-old minors are permitted to marry in Alabama with the consent of a parent or guardian.\(^{87}\) However, Alabama marriage clerks do not always require official proof of age, and clerks may also issue marriage licenses to minors from out of state.\(^{88}\) Since 2019, the requirement that marriage licenses be issued by probate judges has been abolished for parties of all ages; prior to this date, a probate judge was at least nominally involved in granting marriage licenses for the marriage of a minor, to certify the consent of the minor’s parents or guardians.\(^{89}\) Overall, on a scale of 1–5, where 1 is the worst and 5 is the best,\(^{90}\) Alabama ranks as a 2.

Alaska

Prior to 2022, Alaska set the minimum age of marriage at fourteen with judicial approval and permitted a child to marry at age sixteen or seventeen with parental consent.\(^{91}\) In 2022, Alaska removed a judge’s ability to grant fourteen-year-old children marriage licenses by raising the minimum age to sixteen, as long as the judge determines the other party to the marriage is no more than three years older; the marriage is in the “best interests” of the minor; and there is parental consent, or the parents are “unreasonably” withholding consent or are unable to give consent for some other reason. However, judges approving these marriages are not required to have special knowledge of family law or juvenile matters. Official proof of age is not always required, and clerks can approve marriages for out-of-state minors. Alternatively, minors above the age of 16 can marry if they are active-duty military. On a scale of 1–5, Alaska ranks as a 2.

Arizona

Between 2000 and 2018 approximately 8,795 children were married in Arizona. Of those 8,795, approximately 70% to 76% of those marriages would have met the definition of sex crimes had the marital exception not been in place. By 2010 Arizona was among the states with the highest child marriage rates. Arizona updated its child marriage law in 2018, which now completely bans marriage for children below the age of sixteen. The law does permit sixteen and seventeen-year-olds to marry, but only if they are emancipated or have parental consent. Arizona law also requires an age difference of no more than three years between the intended spouses if one party is a minor. Nevertheless, official proof of age and residency are not always required. On a scale of 1–5, Arizona ranks as a 2.

Arkansas

Between 2000 and 2018, approximately 8,458 children were married in Arkansas. In 2007, the minimum age requirements for marriage were seventeen for males and sixteen for females with parental consent. In April 2019, Arkansas Governor Asa Hutchinson signed into law a bill that banned marriage for persons under age seventeen except for applicants who are at least sixteen and pregnant. To qualify for the pregnancy exception, parties must provide proof of the pregnancy, official proof of age, and parental consent. A judge must then review the evidence and determine that the marriage is in the parties’ best interest. If the underage child has already given birth, the court may still authorize the marriage. Arkansas does not require official proof of age or residency for typical marriage applications. In 2021, Arkansas amended the law to increase the pregnancy exception age requirement from sixteen to seventeen.

California

Between 2000 and 2018, California realized the second-highest number of child marriages in the country, with 23,588. Most were aged sixteen or seventeen years old, but more than 9,000 marriage involved children under sixteen including 1,233 children aged fourteen, 78 aged thirteen, and 5 aged ten. Prior to 2018, a minor could marry with the consent of one parent and a judge, following a review of the case that included interviews with the parties involved thus effectively setting the minimum age for marriage at zero. In 2018, California State Senator Jerry Hill sponsored a bill aimed at prohibiting marriage for all minors. The legislation passed and went into effect on January 1, 2019, but the law still allows any person under the age of eighteen to marry with a court order and the consent of only one parent. To obtain the court order, both parties must undergo interviews by Family Court Services and a judge, and, in some cases, attend premarital counseling. The court is also required to consider “whether there is evidence of coercion or undue influence on the minor.” Nevertheless, California law permits children to marry as young as zero and does not require applicants to provide official proof of their age. On a scale of 1–5, California ranks as a 1.

Colorado

Between 2000 and 2018, approximately 5,380 children were married in Colorado. Prior to 2019, Colorado law did not have a marriage age floor. Colorado’s law was revised in 2019 to set a marriage age floor of sixteen and to obligate sixteen and seventeen-year-olds to procure judicial approval prior to being issued a marriage certificate. The judge ruling on marriages involving minors must preside in juvenile court and is required to consider the underage party’s wishes, best interests, and ability to manage his or her own affairs and responsibilities of marriage. In all cases involving minors, courts must appoint an independent guardian ad litem to investigate and report on the relationship. All persons applying for marriage licenses in Colorado must provide official proof of their age. On a scale of 1–5, Colorado ranks as a 4.

Connecticut

Between 2000 and 2020, approximately 1,246 children were married in Connecticut.\(^{125}\) In 2002, child marriage was permitted for those ages sixteen to eighteen with parental consent or under sixteen with judicial approval.\(^{126}\) In 2017, a bill to end underage marriage was proposed and passed in the State House.\(^{127}\) This bill went into effect and now places the legal age of marriage at eighteen; however, minors sixteen and seventeen can still be married with parental consent and the authorization of a probate judge located in the district where the minor resides.\(^{128}\) When considering an application, the judge must consider factors including whether there is coercion.\(^{129}\) Connecticut is one of several states with an un-waivable residency requirement,\(^{130}\) but does not require official proof of age.\(^{131}\) Subsequent bills to end child marriage died in the legislature in 2019 and 2021.\(^{132}\) In 2023, lawmakers introduced HB6569 to end all marriage before 18, which is awaiting action in the joint Judiciary committee.\(^{133}\) On a scale of 1–5, Connecticut ranks as a 2.

Delaware

Between 2000 and 2018, 219 children were married in Delaware.\(^{134}\) Prior to 2018, Delaware did not have an age floor for marriage and children of any age could marry with judicial approval.\(^{135}\) In June 2018, Delaware successfully banned child marriage without exception, becoming the first state to do so in the United States.\(^{136}\) However, Delaware does not require all applicants to provide official proof of their age prior to obtaining a marriage license. On a scale of 1–5, Delaware ranks as a 3.

Florida

Between 2000 and 2018, 17,274 children were married in Florida. Prior to 2018, Florida law did not set a minimum age for marriage. Florida instituted a prohibition against marriage for all children under the age of seventeen in March 2018. The law permits seventeen-year-olds to marry with parental consent as long as the age difference between the intended spouses is two years or less. While the law does not require parties to provide official proof of age or residency, it still resulted in lowering the total number of child marriages in the state; between July and December of 2017, there were 125 child marriages, and between that same time period in 2018, after the change in law, there were only forty-eight child marriages. On a scale of 1–5, Florida ranks as a 3.

Georgia

Between 2000 and 2020, approximately 10,195 children were married in Georgia. Prior to 2019, the minimum marriage age was sixteen, and minors aged sixteen and seventeen could marry parental consent however the age limitation did not apply upon proof of pregnancy of the female minor. In March 2019, the Georgia State Senate unanimously raised the state’s marriage age floor to seventeen by passing a law that only permits emancipated seventeen-year-olds to marry with a court order. Further, the law mandates the older party to the marriage be no more than four years the child’s senior, and all parties are required to submit official proof of their age. Additionally, the parties must separately undergo premarital education and present the judge with a certification of completion. If a minor is seeking emancipation in order to marry, a judge may only approve the emancipation after considering the minor’s best interests, including: whether the minor is being compelled to marry against their will; if there is evidence the minor was a victim of statutory rape by the intended spouse; and whether the intended spouse has a criminal history. There is a mandatory 15-day waiting period between the granting of the emancipation order and the marriage license. On a scale of 1–5, Georgia ranks as a 4.

Hawaii

Between 2000 and 2020, approximately 819 children were married in Hawaii. Prior to 2018, there was no set minimum age of marriage in Hawaii. In 2018, Hawaii amended its law to prohibit children under fifteen to enter into marriage under any circumstance. Sixteen-year-olds may marry if they obtain parental consent, while fifteen-year-olds may marry if they obtain both parental consent and approval of the family court. Hawaii only requires applicants for a marriage certificate to provide official proof of age if a party “appears to any agent to be under the age of eighteen.” Several bills to end or limit child marriage died at the end of the 2020 and 2021 legislative sessions during the covid pandemic, however, there is currently a bill pending in the state legislature, called SB46/HB206, to raise the age floor for marriage to 18. On a scale of 1–5, Hawaii ranks as a 2.

Idaho

Between 2000 and 2018, Idaho did not enforce a marriage age floor and bore the second-highest per-capita rate of child marriage in the nation. Of the approximately 5,160 child marriages during this period, 83% to 87% of those marriages would have met the states definition of sex crimes had marital exceptions not been in place. In 2020, Idaho lawmakers passed a bill that permits minors aged sixteen to eighteen to marry if there is less than a three-year age difference between the minor and the intended spouse. Additionally, all minors are required to obtain parental consent and both parties must provide official proof of age before the marriage can be approved. This proof of age requirement only applies to minor marriage applicants. On a scale of 1–5, Idaho ranks as a 2.

Illinois

Between 2000 and 2016, approximately 7,370 children were married in Illinois. Illinois has not amended its marriage laws in decades, thus permitting children sixteen and older to marry with consent from both parents or with judicial consent. Judges approving minor marriages must consider the parties’ best interests, which cannot be established by pregnancy alone. The law requires all marriage applicants to present “satisfactory” proof of age before they can obtain a marriage license. Four bills seeking to end child marriage died in the legislature in 2022 but a similar bill, HB1252, is awaiting action in the house Family Law & Probate subcommittee. On a scale of 1–5, Illinois ranks as a 4.

Indiana

Between 2000 to 2004 and 2010 to 2018, approximately 3,533 children were married in Indiana. Prior to 2020, the minimum age for marriage was fifteen in Indiana. In July 2020, the law was amended such that a person in Indiana must be eighteen years old to marry, except for minors aged sixteen or seventeen that the juvenile court has emancipated. There is a mandatory 15-day waiting period between the granting of emancipation and the marriage license. The minor party to the marriage must be a maximum of four years younger than their intended spouse, and both parties are required to provide official proof of age to the juvenile court. Additionally, the parties must present the juvenile court with any criminal records and the minor is required to demonstrate official proof of residency in the state. Moreover, the juvenile court is mandated to interview the minor to assess whether the marriage is free from force, fraud, or coercion and is in the minor’s best interests. All applicants for a marriage license in Indiana must furnish proof of age, regardless of age. On a scale of 1–5, Indiana ranks as a 4.

Iowa

Between 2000 and 2018, approximately 1,356 children were married in Iowa. Children in Iowa may be married as young as sixteen with parental consent and court approval. Judges can override a lack of parental consent if they determine consent was “unreasonably” withheld. As a result, the law grants significant power to a judge—who does not need to have specialized training in family law or juvenile matters—to decide whether the parties appear capable of assuming the responsibilities of marriage and whether the marriage serves the “best interest[s]” of the child(ren). Furthermore, official proof of age is not required at the time of marriage. In fact, marriages between parties later found to be under eighteen remain valid, although voidable. To void such a marriage, the party that falsely represented their age must present a birth certificate before their eighteenth birthday. Notably, marriage exempts sex acts from the definition of several sexual offenses including sexual abuse of a minor between the ages 12 and 15. On a scale of 1–5, Iowa ranks as a 2.

Kansas

Between 2000 and 2018, approximately 3,552 children were married in Kansas. Until 2006, Kansas had no law requiring a minimum age for marriage and minors of any age could marry

In Kansas, children as young as fifteen can marry if a district court judge determines the marriage is in the child’s “best interest.” Children aged sixteen and seventeen are permitted to marry with parental or judicial consent. In both cases, the judge does not need specialized training in family law or juvenile matters, and the parties are not required to submit official proof of their age. Further, marriage provides an exception to prosecution for multiple age-based sexual offenses including rape of a child under fourteen. A bill seeking to end all child marriage, HB422, died in the legislature at the end of 2022. A similar bill to end all marriage before age eighteen is awaiting action in the House Federal and State Affairs Committee. On a scale of 1–5, Kansas ranks as a 2.

Kentucky

Between 2000 and 2018, Kentucky’s rate of child marriages per capita ranked fourth highest in the nation. Prior to 2018, the law did not set a minimum age for marriage in Kentucky. One study which examined 11,000 child marriages in Kentucky between 2000 and 2015 and found that age variances as great as a thirteen year old girl marrying a thirty-three year old man and a fifteen year old girl marrying a fifty-two year old man. In spring 2018, Kentucky amended its laws pertaining to child marriage by passing Kentucky Senate Bill 48. Kentucky’s marriage laws now ban marriage for children under the age of seventeen and only allow seventeen-year-olds to marry with a court order issued by a family court or district court judge, provided the age difference between the parties is less than four years. Of note, the law requires the parties to provide official proof of age and residency, parental consent, proof of high school completion or the equivalent, and any criminal records to the family court before a marriage license may be issued. The judge must also conduct an evidentiary hearing to determine whether the

Maine

Between 2000 and 2020, approximately 818 children were married in Maine.\(^{207}\) Prior to 2019, there was no minimum marriage age in Maine and marriage served as an exception to several age-based sex offenses.\(^{208}\) In January 2019, the Maine Legislature proposed “An Act to End Child Marriage,” which prohibited children under age sixteen from entering into marriage under any circumstances.\(^{209}\) In June 2019, both the State House and Senate voted to pass the bill into law, which went into effect on June 16, 2020.\(^{210}\) Maine law now provides that parties must be eighteen to marry but allows sixteen and seventeen-year-olds to marry if they obtain parental consent.\(^{211}\) Maine does not limit the age difference between the parties to be wed.\(^{212}\) In the absence of parents or legal guardians, a probate judge may grant consent, and the parties are not always required to present official proof of age or residency.\(^{213}\) Despite these loopholes, fewer than four out of every 1,000 children are married in the state of Maine, one of the lowest rates of child marriage in the nation.\(^{214}\) A bill seeking to end all marriage before age eighteen, LD622, was defeated in the senate in 2021.\(^{215}\) A similar bill is awaiting action in the joint Judiciary Committee.\(^{216}\) Nevertheless, on a scale of 1–5, Maine ranks as a 2.

Maryland

Michigan

Prior to 2007, the law in Michigan did not specify a minimum marriage age. Michigan’s current law, last amended in 2007, permits sixteen and seventeen-year-old children to enter into marriage with consent from one parent. Children under the age of sixteen may marry with consent from one parent and the approval of a probate judge, effectively setting the marriage age floor at zero. The law does not require the parties to provide official proof of age or residency. Further, marriage provides a defense to prosecution for several age-based sex offenses. Approximately 5,426 children were married in Michigan between 2000 and 2021. On a scale of 1–5, Michigan ranks as a 1.

Minnesota

Prior to 2020, minors aged sixteen and seventeen could marry with parental consent and judicial approval and marriage provided a broad defense to prosecution of age-based sex crimes. As of 2014, an estimated 1,142 children between the ages of fifteen and seventeen had already been married in Minnesota. In 2019, the state eliminated its sweeping marriage defense that had applied to age-based sex offenses. Effective August 2020, Minnesota became one of the few states that prohibit marriage for persons under the age of eighteen without exception. Minnesota’s marriage law also requires official proof of age to apply for a marriage certificate. On a scale of 1–5, Minnesota ranks as a 5.

Mississippi

Between 2000 and 2018, approximately 5,360 children were married in Mississippi.\(^\text{240}\) The law in Mississippi exempts married parties from the definition of statutory rape, even when the child is under fourteen years old, and marriage also provides a broad defense to other age-based sex offenses.\(^\text{241}\) Mississippi attempted to amend its marriage laws in 2021, but the bill died in the legislature.\(^\text{242}\) As a result, children are still permitted to marry in Mississippi. Indeed, Mississippi considers males who are at least seventeen years-old and females who are at least fifteen years-old as “capable in law of contracting marriage.”\(^\text{243}\) Prior to being issued a marriage license, these minors—and all persons under the age of twenty-one—must provide proof of parental consent.\(^\text{244}\) However, children under the ages of seventeen (for males) and fifteen (for females) may also marry if they obtain both parental and judicial consent.\(^\text{245}\) While all persons in Mississippi must furnish official proof of their age prior to obtaining a marriage license,\(^\text{246}\) the other legal loopholes effectively lower the minimum age for marriage to zero in Mississippi.\(^\text{247}\) On a scale of 1–5, Mississippi ranks as a 1.

Missouri

Between 2000 and 2018, over 8,000 minors were married in Missouri, approximately 85% of whom were young girls, making it the state with the third highest rate of child marriage.\(^\text{248}\) Prior to 2018, minors as young as fifteen years old could get married so long as they had parental consent while those younger than fifteen years old could get married with judicial approval.\(^\text{249}\) Marriage also provided a sweeping defense to a number of age-based sex offenses.\(^\text{250}\) In 2018, Missouri revised its law to raise the minimum marriage age to sixteen.\(^\text{251}\) Children aged sixteen and seventeen can enter marriage if they obtain parental consent.\(^\text{252}\) In Missouri, persons aged

Montana

Between 2000 and 2019, approximately 483 children were married in Montana. Montana allows sixteen and seventeen-year-old children to marry with parental consent. A judge may approve the marriage if the child does not have a parent capable of providing consent. Minors are also required to attend at least two sessions of premarital counseling prior to obtaining a marriage license. Additionally, a district court judge—who does not need to have specialization in family or juvenile matters—must determine that the marriage is in the minor’s best interests, which pregnancy alone cannot establish. Montana law bans marriage for children under age sixteen without exception and requires all applicants, regardless of age, to furnish official proof of their age. A bill seeking to end child marriage without exception, HB533, died at the end of the 2019 legislative session. On a scale of 1–5, Montana ranks as a 4.

Nebraska

Between 2000 and 2019, approximately 1,283 children were married in Nebraska. Nebraska has not amended its marriage law in decades but the state requires children to be at least seventeen years old to marry, and even then, seventeen and eighteen-year-olds may only marry after obtaining consent from at least one parent and submitting official proof of their age.

Prior to 2019, the minimum marriage age was set at age thirteen for girls and age fourteen for boys.\(^{273}\) Marriage also provided as a defense to certain age-based sex offenses.\(^ {274}\) New Hampshire amended its marriage laws in 2019 by prohibiting marriage for all persons under the age of sixteen.\(^{275}\) Additionally, the law renders any marriage contract involving a child under age sixteen null and void.\(^ {276}\) Children aged sixteen and seventeen must obtain consent from one parent, judicial approval, and submit official proof of age.\(^{277}\) The judge approving a marriage involving a minor must be from the family division and must determine “by clear and convincing evidence” that the marriage is in the minor party’s best interest.\(^ {278}\) However, a judge is required to deny a marriage application if sexual contact between the parties would constitute sexual assault under state law.\(^ {279}\) New Hampshire’s laws do not involve any independent party to report on the minor’s interests, and there is no limit as to the age differences between the parties.\(^ {280}\) Aside from minors, all marriage applicants in New Hampshire are required to provide proof of their age.\(^ {281}\) Since lawmakers passed the amendment in 2018, five attempts have been made to end child marriage in New Hampshire but all five bills were defeated.\(^ {282}\) On a scale of 1–5, New Hampshire ranks as a 4.

New Jersey

Between 2000 and 2018, approximately 2,231 children were married in New Jersey.\(^ {283}\) Prior to 2018, the state law contained no age floor and sixteen and seventeen year olds could marry with parental consent while those younger could marry with judicial approval.\(^ {284}\) In June 2018, New Jersey amended its marriage laws and became the second state in the nation, after Delaware, to

New Mexico

Between 2000 and 2018, New Mexico realized the eleventh-highest rate of child marriages per capita in the United States. Currently, New Mexico law does not articulate a minimum marriage age, meaning that a child of any age may be married if they meet certain requirements. Sixteen and seventeen-year-olds are permitted to marry if they are emancipated or have parental consent. Minors under age sixteen may also marry if their parent requests the marriage or if the minor is pregnant, as long as they have authorization from the children’s or family court division. Persons applying for marriage licenses in New Mexico are not required to provide official proof of age. On a scale of 1–5, New Mexico ranks as a 1.

New York

Between 2000 and 2010, approximately 3,850 children were married in New York. Before 2017, children aged sixteen and seventeen were permitted to marry if they had parental consent. Children aged fourteen and fifteen were also permitted to marry with parental consent and judicial approval. In 2017, New York amended the law to establish an age floor of seventeen and a requirement of emancipation prior to issuance of a marriage license.

2021, New York became the sixth state to ban child marriage successfully. Its law prohibits marriage for all persons under the age of eighteen without exception and requires that all marriage applicants provide official proof of their age. On a scale of 1–5, New York ranks as a 5.

North Carolina

Between 2000 and 2019, an estimated 9,749 license applications involving minors were submitted in North Carolina, approximately 93% of which were for a marriage between a minor and an adult. Prior to 2021, children aged fourteen and fifteen could seek a “pregnancy exception” where one of the parties to the marriage was pregnant or had already become a parent. In that case, a guardian ad litem would be appointed to evaluate the petition and assess whether the marriage is in the best interests of the child. Sixteen and seventeen year olds could marry with parental consent without the need for appointment of a guardian ad litem. North Carolina amended its marriage laws in 2021 to raise the minimum marriage age to sixteen if the minor acquires parental or judicial consent. The law also added an age gap restriction: a person marrying a sixteen or seventeen-year-old can only be a maximum of four years older than the minor. However, the state does not require parties to supply official proof of their age. On a scale of 1–5, North Carolina ranks as a 2.

North Dakota

Between 2000 and 2018, approximately 306 children were married in North Dakota. Of those marriages, approximately half occurred in violation of statutory rape laws. North Dakota has not amended its law in decades, such that children aged sixteen and seventeen may marry if they have written parental consent and provide official proof of age. The law does not permit marriages involving children below the age of sixteen under any circumstance. All marriage applicants in North Dakota must furnish official proof of their age prior to obtaining a marriage license. On a scale of 1–5, North Dakota ranks as a 4.

Ohio

Between 2000 and 2019, approximately 5,010 children were married in Ohio. Prior to 2019, Ohio law required females be sixteen years old and males eighteen years old to marry however under the pregnancy exception, those younger could marry with parental consent and judicial approval. A bill to end child marriage, SB198, died in the legislature in 2018. However, Ohio strengthened its marriage laws in 2019 by instituting a marriage age floor. The law now requires that a person be eighteen years or older to enter marriage, except for seventeen-year-olds who have obtained consent and emancipation by order of the juvenile court. The juvenile court may only approve a marriage involving a seventeen-year-old if the other party to the marriage is no more than four years older than the minor. Moreover, the juvenile court must consider whether marriage and emancipation are in the minor’s best interests and whether the intended marriage is free of force and coercion. Prior to obtaining a marriage license, Ohio requires applicants to provide official proof of age and residency. An attorney must be.

On a scale of 1–5, Pennsylvania ranks as a 3.

Rhode Island

An estimated 176 children were married in Rhode Island between 2000 and 2019. Of those for whom gender and spousal data were available, 88 percent were girls wed to adult men an average of 4.1 years older. Before 2021, the age of marriage in Rhode Island was eighteen but minors aged sixteen and seventeen were permitted to marry with parental consent and those aged fifteen and younger with parental consent and judicial approval. The judicial approval process did not require the court to interview the child nor consider any criteria prior before approving the marriage. In 2021, Rhode Island amended its marriage laws to become the fifth state in the nation to ban child marriage. Under the new law, a person must be eighteen years or older to obtain a marriage license in the state. All applicants are required to show official proof of age. South Carolina

Prior to 2019, the law in South Carolina permitted sixteen and seventeen year olds to marry with parental consent, however under the “pregnancy exception” children under age sixteen were permitted to marry if they became pregnant or gave birth. In 2019, South Carolina amended its marriage laws to prohibit children under the age of sixteen from entering marriage without exception. Under the current law, sixteen and seventeen-year-olds may marry if they have parental consent and furnish official proof of their age. Aside from minors, applicants are only required to provide proof of their age if they are between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five. However, a bill to end all marriage before the age of 18 is currently awaiting action in the South Carolina Senate Judiciary committee. On a scale of 1–5, South Carolina ranks as a 2.

South Dakota

Between 2000 and 2019, approximately 823 children were married in South Dakota. South Dakota has not amended its marriage laws in decades and currently allows sixteen and seventeen-year-old children to enter marriage if they have the consent of one parent and provide official proof of their age. All marriage applicants in South Dakota, not just minors, are required to furnish official proof of their age prior to obtaining a marriage license. On a scale of 1–5, South Dakota ranks as a 4.

Tennessee

Between 2000 and 2019, approximately 9,882 children were married in Tennessee, making it the state with the sixth highest rate of child marriage per capita in the nation. Prior to 2018, the minimum age of marriage in Tennessee was eighteen but exceptions to the law permitted children to be married at any age with parental consent and judicial approval. Tennessee strengthened its marriage laws in 2018 by prohibiting marriage for any person under the age of seventeen. Seventeen-year-olds are permitted to marry if they have parental consent, provided the other party to the marriage is no more than four years older. Furthermore, each minor must receive a rights and resources factsheet. Minors and all others applying for a marriage license in Tennessee do not need to furnish official proof of their age. On a scale of 1–5, Tennessee ranks as a 3.

Texas

Between 2000 and 2018, approximately 41,774 marriages involving minors took place in Texas. The rate of child marriage prior to 2017 was one of the highest in the nation with nearly 7 in 1,000 minors aged fifteen to seventeen married in Texas in 2014 alone. Prior to 2017, sixteen and seventeen year olds were permitted to marry with parental consent while those under age sixteen required judicial approval based on a finding that the marriage was in the minor’s “best interest.”

Texas passed a law in 2017 that banned marriage for children under eighteen, except for sixteen and seventeen-year-olds who have been emancipated by court order. Texas law requires all parties—regardless of age—to submit official proof of their age prior to obtaining a marriage license. A bill seeking to end child marriage, HB1590, died in 2021 but a new bill is pending in the house Juvenile Justice & Family Issues Committee. On a scale of 1–5, Texas ranks as a 4.

Utah

Between 2000 and 2018, approximately 5,600 children were married in Utah, ranking the seventh-highest in the nation for number of child marriages per capita.359 Prior to 2019, the minimum marriage in the state of Utah was fifteen with parental consent and judicial approval while sixteen and seventeen year olds could marry with parental consent alone.360 In 2019, Utah bolstered its marriage laws by prohibiting persons younger than sixteen from getting married in the state.361 Additionally, the law provides that sixteen and seventeen-year-olds may marry only after submitting official proof of age, receiving consent from one parent, and obtaining authorization from the juvenile court.362 In 2021, the state passed HB406, which did not change the marriage age or existing loopholes, but implemented additional procedural safeguards.363 Prior to authorizing a marriage involving a minor, the judge must determine that the minor is entering the marriage voluntarily and that the marriage is in the minor’s best interest.364 The judge must also require the parties to attend premarital counseling (if available) and is prohibited from authorizing a marriage if the age difference between the parties is more than seven years.365 Aside from minors, Utah does not require its marriage applicants to provide official proof of their age.366 On a scale of 1–5, Utah ranks as a 2.

Vermont

Vermont has not amended its marriage laws in decades and previous bills to end child marriage died in 2018 and 2022 respectively.367 Under current law, Vermont prohibits any child under the age of sixteen from entering marriage, without exception.368 Children aged sixteen and seventeen may marry with the written consent of one parent.369 However, Vermont does not require any marriage applicants to provide official proof of their age.370 A recent bill, H148, seeking to end child marriage passed the house and is not awaiting action in the senate. On a scale of 1–5, Vermont ranks as a 2.

Virginia

Between 2000 and 2010, approximately 6,775 children were married in Virginia. Prior to 2016, the law did not specify a minimum age for marriage; sixteen- and seventeen-year-olds could marry with parental consent and those younger could marry under a “pregnancy exception” with parental consent. Under prior law, clerks issued all marriage licenses and no judicial review process was required. In 2016, Virginia amended its marriage laws to prohibit marriage for persons under age eighteen, except for sixteen and seventeen-year-olds who have been emancipated by a juvenile or domestic relations court order. For a judge to emancipate a minor based on the minor’s intent to marry, the judge must determine that the minor is entering the marriage willingly, the marriage is in the minor’s best interests, and the marriage will not endanger the minor. Virginia does not always require its marriage applicants to provide official proof of age. On a scale of 1–5, Virginia ranks as a 2.

Washington

Between 2000 and 2018, approximately 4,483 children were married in Washington. Washington has not amended its marriage laws in decades such that the state permits children under age seventeen to enter marriage with judicial approval, provided they demonstrate necessity for the marriage to a judge in the county of the minor’s residence. This means that with a judge’s approval, a child of any age can be married in Washington. Moreover, the judge presiding over such an application does not need specialized knowledge of juvenile or family

Seventeen-year-old children in Washington do not need a judge’s approval; they only need to acquire written consent from one parent. Additionally, marriage license applicants in Washington do not need to supply official proof of their age. Three prior bills to end or limit child marriage died in the legislature in 2018 and 2020 but a 2023 bill seeking to eliminate all marriage before age eighteen passed the house unanimously and is awaiting action in the senate. On a scale of 1–5, Washington ranks as a 1.

West Virginia

Between 2000 and 2021, approximately 3,663 children were married in West Virginia, making it the state with the highest rate of child marriage per capita in the nation. Prior to 2023, children as young as sixteen were permitted to marry with written parental consent. However, West Virginia law did not impose age sixteen as a marriage age floor, thus allowing children under age sixteen to also enter marriage as long as they obtained both parental and judicial consent. To approve a marriage involving a minor younger than sixteen, a judge must determine that the marriage is in the child’s best interests, but the judge considering the application is not required to have specialized knowledge in juvenile or family matters. West Virginia does require that all parties to a marriage application present official proof of their age prior to being issued a marriage license. In March 2023, a bill passed that if signed by the Governor will prohibit anyone under age sixteen from marrying but permit those ages sixteen and seventeen to marry with parental consent provided that the age difference between the individuals is four years or less. need to furnish official proof of age before being issued a marriage license. On a scale of 1–5, Washington, D.C. ranks as a 2.

American Samoa

In 2018, Governor Lolo Matalasi Moliga signed into law a bill that successfully banned persons under the age of eighteen from entering marriage in American Samoa without exception. Marriage applicants in American Samoa are not required to supply official proof of their age. On a scale of 1–5, American Samoa ranks as a 3.

Guam & Northern Mariana Islands

The law in Guam permits children aged sixteen and seventeen to marry, provided a parent or guardian submits written consent and the marriage is approved by the Superior Court. However, courts may authorize marriages for children under age sixteen if the minor applicant is “with a child.” Applicants for marriage licenses in Guam are not required to provide proof of their age. On a scale of 1–5, Guam ranks as a 1.

In the Northern Mariana Islands, the marriage age floor depends on citizenship. If one or both parties are noncitizens, the female applicant must be at least sixteen years-old, while the male must be at least eighteen years-old. In this instance, if the female is sixteen or seventeen, she must have the consent of at least one parent. However, there are no minimum age requirements for marriages between citizens. Regardless of citizenship, marriage applicants are not required to provide official proof of age.\textsuperscript{409} On a scale of 1–5, the Northern Mariana Islands ranks as a 1.

Puerto Rico

Under Puerto Rico law, those under age twenty-one are required to obtain the consent of their parent or guardian to marry.\textsuperscript{410} However, eighteen-year-olds do not need parental or judicial authorization in cases where “it is proven that the betrothed woman has been raped, seduced or is pregnant.”\textsuperscript{411} Puerto Rico law prohibits males under eighteen and females under sixteen from entering marriage but also provides several exceptions to this rule.\textsuperscript{412} For instance, if the parties were underage when they were married, the marriage is nevertheless valid if the parties lived together without anyone objecting until they reached marriageable age or if they became pregnant.\textsuperscript{413} Additionally, fifteen-year-old girls are allowed to marry if they “have been seduced” and have parental or judicial consent.\textsuperscript{414} Seventeen-year-old boys may also enter marriage if they are accused of “having seduced” a fifteen-year-old girl and have obtained parental or judicial consent.\textsuperscript{415} As a result, Puerto Rico’s law does not institute an effective marriage age floor. Puerto Rico also does not require its marriage applicants to provide official proof of their age.\textsuperscript{416} On a scale of 1–5, Puerto Rico ranks as a 1.

U.S. Virgin Islands

In 2019, the legislature in the U.S. Virgin Islands voted unanimously to end child marriage in the territory.\textsuperscript{417} Governor Albert Bryan Jr. signed the bill into law on January 18, 2020, adding the Virgin Islands to the list of states and United States territories that prohibit issuing marriage licenses to persons under the age of eighteen without exception. However, the U.S. Virgin Islands still does not require marriage applicants to furnish official proof of their age prior to obtaining a marriage license. On a scale of 1–5, the U.S. Virgin Islands ranks as a 3.

III. Updates in 2022

During the 2021-2022 Legislative Session, at least seventeen states submitted bills to improve their child marriage laws, including Alaska, Hawaii, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Texas, Vermont, and West Virginia. In six of those states—Alaska, Maryland, Massachusetts, New York, North Carolina, and West Virginia—the bills successfully passed into law.

IV. Conclusion

While many people cling to the flawed assumption that child marriage is not an American issue, children are married every day in the United States and are thus at higher risk for harms including death, serious health issues, and physical and sexual violence. A collection of states and territories have passed new laws to limit its prevalence, but many of these laws are riddled with exceptions and are inconsistent across state lines. Three factors improve child protection from the severe negative impacts of child marriage: (1) mandatory age floors set at eighteen, (2) proof of age and residency requirements, and (3) the elimination of parental and judicial consent exceptions. Ultimately, state laws that (1) ban marriage for persons under the age of eighteen, without exception, and (2) require all marriage applicants to furnish official proof of their age will be the most effective way to thwart child marriage nationally and truly protect children.
